

LIT CRI '13

Literature and Urban Space

Literature today, survives in a rich, wide and chaotic space in relation with increasing communication utilities, new digital channels, increased creative writing efforts, intensive translation activities, effect of big media, rewards and activities.

The changing urban characteristics of the earth play an important role in the transformation of Which urban aspects 21th century literature contains, which characteristics in literature, too, terms of spatial narration are already obvious and which surprises hide the first indications inside are LIT CRI the questions waiting for answers are the main questions to be discussed. '13 sets off for raising questions as well as searching for new answers on the relation of city and fiction. The conference will tackle reciprocal effects between architecture and fiction, whether they emerge in literary forms related to visual narratives and urban culture. LIT CRI '13 will be arranged between dates of 6–8 Nov, 2013 by DAKAM in the hostage of MSFAU.

<http://www.litriconference.org/p/themes.html> For conference themes;
<http://www.litriconference.org/p/registration.html> For abstract submission and pre-registration;